

Three Academic Librarians Honored at the Indiana Library Federation's 2009 Annual Conference

At the Awards and Honors Banquet, Monday, October 19, 2009, three academic librarians were honored by the Indiana Library Federation. They were

1. John M. Robson, recent retiree after 25 years from the John A. Logan Library at the Rose Hulman Institute of Technology, received the 2009 Lifetime Achievement Award

John has had a distinguished career in which he has advanced librarianship and inspired librarians and archivists in many ways. He has served on numerous committees and held officer positions for academic, professional, and voluntary organizations, including most recently serving as Secretary of the Academic Libraries of Indiana 2008-2009 and chairperson of the Resource Sharing Committee, 2007-2008.

2. Jaena Hollingsworth, Assistant Librarian and English Department Liaison at the University Library, IUPUI, received the Outstanding New Librarian Award

Colleagues nominating Jaena pointed out that she takes time to meet with students who are working on research projects and helps them to better understand how to navigate through the intricate database and index systems to find just the right information they need for their research projects. They also commented that Jaena has made a significant impact at the IUPUI University Library by assisting with developing a marketing plan for ongoing outreach initiatives. 3. Philip E. Orr, Distance Learning Librarian at the David L. Rice Library, University of Southern Indiana, received the Outstanding Leadership and Service to the Library Community Award

Colleagues nominating Philip said that he has worked vigorously to raise awareness throughout Indiana about the need to begin a division for distance learning librarians under the umbrella of ILF, a task that he successfully accomplished and for which he serves as chairperson.
